JOURNAL 4/26/17

Y KELSEY GEE

Parents rejoice 2017 is to courting recruiters, the haping up to be another. Class of 2017 has some home eatthy year for college hiring. Work to do to the attention of Colleges in the strong are ill-prepared for the latest finds that emission in any covered positions. Concludes a survey of suggests that, when it comes to courting recruiters, the level roles come i Class of 2017 has some home—fied candidates.

lop employers into that emilion in an inally covered potential in a company and monstry, and sitions, concludes a survey of limit ask better questions in radiates than they brought or toughly 400 employers and interheis. Plus those employers and interheis. Plus those employers and enter the companies say they are ducted by ICIMS for a result of the r employers and college semors; ployers reported that one-third of all applications for entry level roles come from unquali-

> More than 60% of employers. in the survey said applicants ought to be more familiar with the company and industry, and skills, too. Engineering: business and computer science majors are in highest demand, with at leasttwo-fhirds of employers seeking graduates in those fields, accord-ing to NACE But fewer than half of the students; surveyed, by iCIIVIS majored in those subjects

College seniors feel good about their prospects; more Please see JOBS page B2

 Management: Focusing on HR before ping-pong tables ___ 89

Continued from the prior page than 90% of the students surveyed by iCIMS reported feeling confident about their interview skills. They also expect to earn Thire roughly 10,000 college grads over $53,000 in their first job. for its entry-level management compared with average salary of training program this year. $45,000 that recruiters expect. Those management trainees to pay for those positions ties, employers, too, have unrealistically high expectations for 21-year-olds, said Susan Vitale, chief marketing officer to be a little crazy in their experience requirements, speaking as one myself."

Note: Current hiring plans compared with degrees conferred in 2015 Sources: National Association of Colleges and Employers;

National Center for Education Statistics

Unlike many employers, Enterprise Holdings Inc. doesn't expect college hires to arrive at work with all the exact skills they need.

The car-rental company will pay for those positions will be put on a two-year career-While new grads have a development program, where "bloated" sense of their abili- they will learn on the job, said Marie Artim, the car-rental firm's head of talent acquisition.

"This is generation that's grown up with syllabuses and for the Matawan, N.J.-based structure," which makes them iCIMS. "Hiring managers tend, a good fit for such programs,

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL.

The College Majors Employers Want Employers are on the hunt for engineering, business and computer-science graduates; here's how popular those majors are among college seniors. PCT, OF EMPLOYERS PCT, OF SENIORS MAJOR LOOKING TO HIRE IN MAJOR Business/Accounting 19.2% Engineering # 457 Computer sciences 31% Economics/Social sciences 33.9% 井 8.8% Physical sciences 🛣 20.5% 16% Humanities 14 11.6% 2.3% Agriculture 🗜 1.9% Education 18% 4.8% らナルカモル七ら Health sclences 1.8% 11.4%